About Fairfield's Community Development Block Grant Program

Title 1 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 authorized Community Development Block Grant entitlement funds to qualifying cities. The overall goal of the program is to develop and maintain viable urban communities by providing decent housing and a suitable living environment and expanding economic opportunities primarily for low- and moderate-income persons.

Since 1975, the City of Fairfield has been classified as an entitlement city, which is defined as a principal city within a Metropolitan Statistical Area with a population over 50,000. HUD determines the amount of each annual entitlement grant by a statutory dual formula which uses several objective measures of community needs, including the extent of poverty, population, housing overcrowding, age of housing, and population growth lag in relationship to other metropolitan areas.

The City of Fairfield encourages participation by Fairfield residents in the formation of the Community Development Block Grant priorities, strategies, and funding allocations.
